

Problem Statement:

Most students struggle with their workload, therefore there should be a proposal to create personalized homework schedules that, if needed, a student could talk to their professor about and set up.

Details

Many students deal with a workload heavier than they can handle, especially freshmen, so there should be a less harsh penalty if the deadline is for example the next day and a student turns it in late because while some students may have the ability to complete the assignment, others may not have time because they're balancing other classes as well as after school activities or communities they're apart of.